GEORGETOWN UNIVERSITY: A BRIEF HISTORY

CONGRATULATIONS, VENERABLE MOTHER . . . ! You alone, among all the colleges, have lived as long as the republic.” That inscription, in Latin, greeting the visitors to the celebration of the completion of Georgetown’s first century in 1889, reminded them of the University’s unique origin as an American Catholic institution of higher learning.

Two seemingly unrelated events created the conditions for this establishment of the first Catholic college in the United States: the Suppression of the Society of Jesus and the American Revolution. When Pope Clement XIV under pressure from the courts of Europe suppressed the Jesuit order in 1773, the Reverend John Carroll, a Marylander who had entered the Society in Europe in 1753 and remained there to teach in Jesuit colleges, returned home in 1774. Had the Society not been suppressed, it is highly unlikely that Carroll would ever have seen America again. A year later he became a staunch supporter of the revolution against England. For Catholics the revolution meant the opportunity to free themselves from the civil disabilities that had plagued them and other minorities in most colonies, including Maryland. With independence Catholics were now able, at least theoretically, to vote, hold office, worship publicly, and educate their children in their own schools.

John Carroll founded Georgetown in 1789, making it the oldest Catholic and Jesuit institution of higher learning in the United States.

No one saw more clearly the needs and possibilities for the education of the Catholic community in the young republic than did Carroll, whom Rome appointed as first head of the American Church in 1784. Carroll wanted to take full advantage of the unprecedented freedom given to the Church in the United States to establish a school in the liberal arts tradition that had so distinguished Jesuit education for more than two hundred years. He wanted his academy to be “the mainsheet anchor” of American Catholics, an institution that could uniquely “give consistency to our religious views in this country,” by fostering an education that would combine the best of the Catholic and republican cultures. Under Bishop Carroll’s leadership, ex-Jesuits established Georgetown in the late 1780s. In 1789 he secured the deed to some 60 acres of ground on a hill overlooking the village of Georgetown, a thriving tobacco port in Maryland. A few months before the academy opened in January of 1792, the bishop learned that the capital would be established in the neighborhood. It “gives a weight to our establishment,” he noted, “which I little thought of when I recommended that situation.”

Lack of resources – money, faculty, students – severely crippled the College during its first two decades. With the partial restoration of the Society of Jesus in 1805, the order was given the direction of the institution. For the next forty years European Jesuits constituted a substantial portion of the faculty and were responsible for the significant contributions that Georgetown made in the sciences in the second half of the century, most notably in astronomy. A year after the complete restoration of the order in 1814, the College secured its first charter from the United States government.

In accordance with Carroll’s determination that his academy be no Catholic ghetto but “open to Students of every religious Profession,” nearly a fifth of the students during the first 10 years were Protestants. By the 1830s Jews were attending the College. Throughout the nineteenth century religious pluralism characterized Georgetown’s student population.

From the beginning Georgetown was a national, indeed international, school. Its proximity to Washington with its diplomatic community was obviously a major reason for its cosmopolitan character but not an exclusive one (in the 1790s, for instance, nearly 20 percent of the students came from the West Indies). Its faculty was as diverse in origin as its students, not only Jesuit emigrés from Poland, Italy, Germany, and Belgium, but Sulpician refugees from France between 1791 and 1815.

By and large, however, Georgetown was a southern college in the antebellum period. Enslaved persons labored on Jesuit-owned plantations in Maryland, in the local neighborhood, and on the Georgetown College campus. Of its alumni who served in the Civil War, more than four-fifths were Confederates. The war nearly closed the College. The student body fell from 313 in 1859 to 17 in the fall of 1861. Federal troops briefly occupied the campus in the first month of the war. In the fall of 1862 several of the college buildings were turned into a hospital for four months after the Second Battle of Bull Run (Manassas).

In the postwar decades the College increasingly became more northern and Catholic, but the majority of students continued to range between the ages of 10 and 16. By 1871 Georgetown comprised not only the college on the hilltop but two professional schools of medicine and law in the city, founded by local doctors and lawyers in 1849 and 1870 respectively. Two presidents in the last three decades of the century attempted to convert these loosely connected schools into a university. Reverend Patrick Healy, S.J., the son of a Georgia planter and his common-law slave wife, as prefect of studies (1868–1878) and president (1873–1881) reformed the College's curriculum, with a new emphasis on history and the natural sciences. To provide adequate library, classroom, laboratory, and residential facilities he constructed the magnificent Flemish Renaissance structure that now bears his name. At the professional level he oversaw the lengthening of the programs in both medical and legal education from two to three years. In 1880 he founded the Alumni Association.

Reverend Joseph Havens Richards, S.J., the son of an Episcopalian priest, continued Healy's efforts during his decade-long presidency (1888–1898). Richards began graduate courses in the arts and sciences, built new facilities for the law and medical schools, including a hospital, and thwarted efforts to transfer the professional schools to the new Catholic University of America. During these years Georgetown began to establish a national reputation in baseball and football.

Expansion at the professional level continued into the new century. The Washington Dental College was acquired in 1901. Three years later the Nursing School was founded to provide support for the University Hospital. By 1914 the total University population was 1378, of whom 912 were in the law school, one of the nation's largest, and exclusively a night school until 1921. (A college degree was not yet required to study law.) Dr. George Kober, dean from 1901 to 1927, ably led the Medical School through the period of reform that revolutionized American medicine in the early part of the century.

World War I caused a brief decline in the professional schools. On the main campus the entire student body was mobilized by law into the Students' Army Training Corps. In 1919 the Preparatory School completed its separation from the University with its relocation in suburban Maryland. That same year the School of Foreign Service was founded under the direction of Reverend Edmund Walsh, S.J., to prepare students for careers in diplomacy or international business. Within five years the enrollment reached 500.

The Centennial Celebration took place in 1889

In the 1920s University enrollment nearly doubled, with substantial increases in all schools, except law. New facilities—New North, Copley, White-Gravenor, the Medical-Dental Building – reflected the growth. The football team, a national power since 1914, peaked under coach Lou Little in the late twenties.

The Depression was a period of consolidation for Georgetown. Under the presidency of Reverend Arthur O’Leary, S.J., the Graduate School was formally organized and faculty recruited for selective programs in mathematics, the natural sciences, economics, history and government. Father O’Leary also revitalized the Alumni Association with James Ruby as first director. He was also responsible for the brief revival of intercollegiate football under Jack Hagerty in the years preceding World War II.

The second “Great War” transformed the main campus from a college to a testing center for the Army Specialized Training Center. By 1943 there were but 130 students at the Law School. The Medical School alone kept its prewar enrollment. In 1944 the Graduate School admitted women for the first time.

As in the twenties enrollment virtually doubled, as the GI Bill opened the University’s doors to many who could not have considered such an education before the war. Temporary buildings accommodated the overflow of students. Substantial numbers of lay faculty were hired, not only on the main campus but at the Medical Center where Dr. Harold Jaegers reorganized the departments and curriculum. The new hospital was opened in 1947. Under Reverend Edward Bunn, S.J., (1952–1964) the University entered the modern world of higher education with the restructuring of schools and the introduction of professional standards for faculty. Two new schools were divided from the School of Foreign Service, the School of Languages and Linguistics (1949) and the School of Business Administration (1957). The School of Continuing Studies was established in 1970.

The last three decades of the twentieth century were the most dynamic in Georgetown’s history as the institution acquired national and international stature. The building boom was but the most visible evidence. Between 1970 and 1990 the main campus alone added a major library, five student villages, a large academic building (Bunn Intercultural Center), a field house, and a university complex with facilities for conferences, student clubs and the MBNA Career Education Center. Undergraduates began to rank in quality with the finest in the country, as the steady number of Rhodes, Marshall, and Mellon fellowships won by Georgetown students and alumni/ae over this period attested. Between 1984 and 2002 graduates of Georgetown won 18 Rhodes Scholarships, one of the top records of any institution of higher education in the nation. In a slightly longer period (1982-2006) they won thirteen Marshalls. The faculty in the several schools increasingly gained recognition among their peers in their respective professional fields. The growing stature of Georgetown's faculty was reflected in the increasing number of prestigious awards (Guggenheim and MacArthur Fellowships, NEH and NSF awards) that they earned. The Graduate School made distinct strides toward achieving distinction in certain fields in the humanities, social sciences, and sciences appropriate to the university's tradition, location, and resources. The MBA and Public Policy programs were both ranked among the top twenty in their fields by the end of the 1990s. The Medical Center continued to build upon its excellent tradition of research in cardiology, renal medicine, and other fields that it has established in the past forty years, while making major commitments to newer fields, most notably cancer research with the establishment of the Lombardi Center in the 1970s and biomedical research. By 1995 Georgetown was receiving more than $100 million in grants for research in the latter field. In 1997 the Medical Center was the beneficiary of a $62 million private gift, the largest in the university's history, to support research. The School of Nursing, which became the School of Nursing & Health Studies, was by the mid Nineties ranked among the top 25 nursing programs in the nation. It is now two schools: the School of Nursing and the School of Health. The Law Center not only became again one of the largest schools in the country but by the end of the 1980s ranked as one of the top ten, most noted for its leadership in clinical legal education. It added three new facilities in the Edward Bennett Williams Library, the Bernard S. and Sarah M. Gewirz Student Center, and the new wing of the Bernard P. McDonough Hall for offices and classrooms.

The improvement of the university's libraries was, beginning in the late Seventies, made a top priority. Over the course of the next quarter century, the main campus libraries more than doubled their holdings, to about two million volumes; Lauinger's Special Collections became notable for its development of collections in Jesuit, Catholic, and political history. By the mid-nineties the law library ranked seventh in the nation. Significantly during this period Georgetown began or housed four new centers connected with research in the field of social ethics and social policy: the Kennedy Institute of Ethics, the Woodstock Theological Center, the Center for Immigration Policy and Refugee Assistance, and the Center for Business and Public Policy. Other notable developments in Georgetown's strength in regional studies were the inauguration of the Center for Contemporary Arab Studies in the early 1970s; and institution of the Center for Australian and New Zealand Studies as well as that of the Center for Russian and East European Studies in the late 1990s.

The University's Medical School, founded in 1851, is part of a dynamic Medical Center complex.

Strong administrative leadership in those decades developed the institution's academic and financial strengths. Reverend Timothy Healy, S.J., (1976-1989) gave the university an unprecedentedly national voice as he became one of the influential leaders in higher education by articulating its ideals and challenges, as well as defining the unique Catholic and Jesuit traditions that inform Georgetown. He personally led the university in becoming more diverse in its student body and faculty. By 1989 minorities accounted for over 20 percent of Georgetown's students. He also was instrumental in the quintupling of the institution's endowment. Healy's successor, Reverend Leo O'Donovan, S.J., (1989-2001) continued that remarkable growth pattern by launching the Third Century Campaign to raise a billion dollars for the university's capital needs and development. O'Donovan was also responsible for the appointment of a significant number of women to major administrative positions within the university, including the provost of the university, executive vice-president of the Law Center, dean of the College, treasurer, and general counsel. Women also greatly increased their numbers within the faculty during the nineties, a trend that had begun under Healy. By 2001 women constituted nearly 40 percent of the faculty across the university. Under both Healy and O'Donovan there was a significant increase in faculty positions and a sharp rise in the number of endowed chairs, in an era of general faculty retrenchment in higher education. By 2001 there were 63 endowed chairs on the Main Campus alone. Three new major research/teaching centers were launched in the period: the BMW Center for German and European Studies, the Center for Muslim-Christian Understanding, and the Center for New Designs in Learning and Scholarship. O'Donovan also oversaw the restructuring of the Medical Center and the separation of the hospital from the medical school.

In 2001 John J. DeGioia, Ph.D. became Georgetown's 48th president, its first lay leader. He served in that capacity until November 2024. Under his leadership the University surpassed its billion dollar goal for its Third Century Campaign. A major new housing and dining complex for undergraduates and the Jesuit community – the Southwest Quadrangle – opened in the fall of 2003. Two years later, the Royden B. Davis, S.J. Center for the Performing Arts was dedicated. A $30 million donation from the McDonough family to the Business School in 1998 enabled the school, now the Robert Emmett McDonough School of Business, to begin plans for the construction of a new home between the Leavey Center and Harbin Field. At the Law Center the Eric E. Hotung International Law Center Building and a sport and fitness center completed the enlargement of that campus in 2004. The following year the School of Foreign Service opened the BSFS program in Qatar, part of the school's goal of becoming an international presence in the Middle East. In 2009 the School of Foreign Service held its first commencement in Doha, Qatar, producing the first graduates from the University's Middle East initiative. In Fall 2010, the School of Foreign Service in Qatar moved into its new home on the campus of Education City. The University's long standing commitment to science education and research, which dates from its earliest days, was confirmed in 2012 with the opening of Regents Hall, which provides a comprehensive research and teaching center for the sciences including support for innovative education and interdisciplinary research. This Georgetown science milestone was achieved in large part due to the generosity of the University's Board of Regents. In 2013, as a result of a transformative gift from alumnus Frank McCourt, the Georgetown Public Policy Institute became the McCourt School of Public Policy. In 2017, Georgetown renamed two buildings as part of its efforts to recognize and acknowledge it ties to slavery. Isaac Hawkins Hall was named for one of the 272 enslaved persons sold by the Maryland Province of the Jesuits in 1838 for the benefit of the University. Anne Marie Becraft Hall is named for the 19th-century free woman of color who founded one of the first schools for black girls in Georgetown and later became one of America's first black nuns.

The University's ongoing commitment to promote social justice and ecumenism was reflected in its establishment of the center for Social Justice Research, Teaching, and Service in 2001 as well as the Berkeley Center for Religion, Peace, and World Affairs in 2006. The latter was part of Georgetown's plan to become a leader in the interdisciplinary study of religion and its role in world affairs, a goal it had already begun to pursue through its Center for Muslim-Christian Understanding, the Center for Jewish Civilization and the Catholic Studies Program.

Building on the presence of Georgetown Law in downtown DC for the past 155 years, we are growing our impact in the university's third century with the new Capitol Campus just blocks from the U.S. Capitol. In addition to residential and administrative buildings, the McCourt School moved to the newly opened 125 E Street in 2024, with additional academic programs and the School of Continuing Studies moving to 111 Massachusetts Ave NW later this year. A home for discovery, interdisciplinary and civic engagement, the Capitol Campus builds on Georgetown's historic strengths and brings together new opportunities for collaboration in a vibrant new living and learning community in the heart of DC.

For more than 150 years, students have participated in intercollegiate athletics on the Hilltop. A regional power during its first 100 years of competition, in 1979 Georgetown co-founded the Big East Conference and subsequently emerged as a national force in intercollegiate circles. Since then, Georgetown has sustained its longest stretch of athletic success in its history, which continues through the present day.

During this modern era, national coaching legends John Thompson Jr. (men's basketball) and Frank Gagliano (track & field/cross country) were followed by Hall of Fame coaches Kim Simons (women's lacrosse), Dave Urick (men's lacrosse) and Tony Johnson (rowing). Following in their footsteps currently are accomplished head coaches Mike Callahan (sailing), Brian Wiese (men's soccer), Dave Nolan (women's soccer), Kevin Warne (men's lacrosse), and a roster of talented up-and-coming coaches.

With the introduction of 11 female sports over the past 50 years, 14 women's teams now compete for the Blue & Gray. Hoya women have captured multiple individual national titles in track & field, tennis and team championships in rowing. Throughout the 2022 year, the Department of Athletics honored the contributions of women with a special campaign of recognition entitled: Celebrating Georgetown Women in Sports.

The first two decades of the 2000's saw NCAA team championships won in women's cross country and men's soccer as well as multiple national championships in sailing. Men's basketball reached the Final Four, women's soccer advanced to the College Cup twice and women's basketball made the Elite Eight. All-America selections over this period totaled more than 500, and dozens of conference championships – both individual and team – were won by a wide diversity of Hoya student-athletes and their teams.

The early years of the modern era added the multi-purpose Yates Field House that provided an on-campus swimming & diving venue and indoor practice space for tennis and track. More recently, the John R. Thompson Jr. Intercollegiate Athletic Center, a state-of-the-art training and practice facility with a focus on the needs of the student-athlete, opened. The completion of Shaw Field (soccer) and Cooper Field (multi-sport) followed soon afterwards.

In the twenty-first century the university continued to build upon its distinctive characteristics: Jesuit and Catholic in tradition, located in the nation's capital, dedicated to academic excellence, and international in its focus and engagement. As its Mission Statement of 2000 reaffirmed: "the University was founded on the principle that serious and sustained discourse among people of different faiths, cultures, and beliefs promotes intellectual, ethical, and spiritual understanding. We embody this principle in the diversity of our students, faculty, and staff, our commitment to justice and the common good, our intellectual openness, and our international character." Georgetown, it stated, remains very much "an academic community dedicated to creating and communicating knowledge [by providing] excellent undergraduate, graduate, and professional education in the Jesuit tradition – for the glory of God and the well-being of humankind."

THE GEORGETOWN SEAL

THE GREAT SEAL OF GEORGETOWN UNIVERSITY is nearly as old as the institution itself. It bears the founding date, 1789, and the Latin inscription Collegium Georgiopolitanum Ad Ripas Potomaci in Marylandia. Before the founding date of the District of Columbia, the Village of Georgetown was indeed “on the banks of the Potomac in Maryland.”

The seal bears 16 stars, which dates it between 1796 when Tennessee was admitted to the Union and 1803 when Ohio, the 17th state, was admitted. The scroll in the eagle’s mouth bears the words “Utraque Unum,” which comes from the epistle to the Ephesians. The passage from which the two words are taken tells of the oneness of Jew and Gentile in Christ.

But now in Christ Jesus ye who sometimes were far off are made nigh by the blood of Christ. For he is our peace who hath made both one, . . . Now therefore ye who are no more strangers and foreigners, but fellow citizens with the saints, and of the household of God.

As is the way in universities, the two words have taken on a variety of meanings from other contexts: the accommodation of learning and faith; the gathering of the sciences and the arts; and, most movingly of all, the joining of the blue and gray after the Civil War. It is hard not to think that the original choice of this text looked also to the fit of the old faith into the new Republic, the dream of Archbishop Carroll.

In 1844, a round version of the seal was adopted, and that again was modified in 1894. That version organized the seal more tightly, left out much of its detail, and rather pompously substituted thirteen stars for the sixteen on the original. In 1977, it was voted to return to the original seal, with all its historical memories, the one that is reproduced here.

Who the artist was no one knows, but the school accounts tell us that on May 11, 1798, Georgetown received a cash gift for the engraving of the seal from Justine Douat, who had served as a nurse for Georgetown’s younger students. The artist could well have been Miss Douat, but could also have been one of the early Jesuits who served on Georgetown’s staff.

THE KLEISLEY CHALICE

THE KLEISLEY CHALICE IS A memorial for the late Robert N. Kleisley, a 1955 graduate of the School of Business Administration, a tireless alumni leader and benefactor of Georgetown University. During his lifetime, besides being a Hoya fan, he gave generously of himself to establish the alumni interviewing admissions program and he was an early supporter of Georgetown's Concentrated Care Center and the Vincent T. Lombardi Cancer Research Center. In addition, he directed in his will that a portion of his estate be donated to support scholarships for undergraduate students. Mr. Kleisley also bequeathed to Georgetown his class ring requesting that it be incorporated into a chalice for the celebration of Holy Mass. The Kleisley Chalice, standing approximately twelve inches tall, is made of highly polished hammered silver lined with gold. His class ring with its diamond and setting intact is mounted on the base of the chalice. The height of the chalice makes it especially effective in the outdoor setting of the Baccalaureate. The paten, which is also fashioned from silver lined with gold, bears the seal of the Society of Jesus. Both pieces were created by artist and master silversmith Fred Fenster during the Bicentennial year. Mr. Fenster is professor of art at the University of Wisconsin.

The Kleisley Chalice and its paten are the first of the Bicentennial sacred vessels that one day will be completed by the addition of a great flagon, smaller chalices for administering the Holy Eucharist and several ciboria to hold the consecrated bread.

THE GEORGETOWN MACE

A MACE WAS ORIGINALLY A HEAVY STAFF or club entirely of metal with a metal head, most often spiked and was used as a weapon of war. It later became a sceptre of office, resembling in shape the original weapon, which was borne before officials on ceremonial occasions. In the House of Commons to this day the mace lies upon the table before the speaker as a symbol of the authority of the House. The ancient universities at Cambridge and Oxford still carry the mace as a symbol of university authority.

The Georgetown mace, while retaining the traditional form of the weapon, is essentially cruciform. The base begins with a square and the staff develops into four distinct elements which merge and become integral with the crowning sphere of silver, a symbol for God. The symbol of the mace speaks to the flow and growth of an organic form, and also suggests human learning with its final culmination in God Himself.

Georgetown's mace is of ebony with the base, sphere and medallions of sterling and silver. The stone breaking out of the top of the sphere is azurite. The mace was commissioned by the University in 1982, and was made as a gift to Georgetown by Paul A. Cavanagh of Greenville, Rhode Island. It is borne at the head of the University's academic procession in any ceremony during which degrees are awarded, or in which the faculty appears in formal academic dress.

ACADEMIC DRESS

T

HE ACADEMIC ATTIRE OF A COLLEGE FACULTY AT ITS formal ceremonies reveals the medieval origins of the university. Up until the early eighteenth century men and women wore their rank on their backs, or on their heads or hands. Great ladies wore rings and tiaras, great lords and kings wore crowns, the rich wore heavy gold chains, and mere players like Shakespeare wore the livery of their patrons. We have not totally lost this custom considering the ubiquitous white coats of physicians and computer experts, the robes and wigs of English judges and barristers, the gowns that preachers and choir members wear, and the collars of the clergy.

The original robes worn by academics were made of heavy wool, to protect against the pervasive chill of unheated academic halls. The general rule of such regalia is the higher the degree, the gaudier the outfit. The University of Paris robes its doctorates in gold, Bologna crowns them with what look like lamp shades, and at Oxford and Cambridge doctors wear bright scarlet. The lesser degrees, those of master and bachelor, have robes that are generally black, but they too are trimmed with a colorful hood, and in England even with fur.

Doctoral gowns in America were once all black, and the only way of identifying their source was by the hood. In the twentieth century, however, various universities began to clothe their age with new glamour. Harvard and Fordham doctoral gowns are now maroon, Yale's dark blue, Columbia's are light blue, and Georgetown's are blue with gray stripes, the colors the school adopted after the Civil War.

The doctor's gown is the fullest of the three, and the most elaborate. It has long bell sleeves, and velvet panels down its front with three stripes of the same material on the sleeves. The master's gown is the only one under which a suit coat must be worn, because its long squared-off sleeves have a hole in them through which the arms protrude. The bachelor's gown is the simplest, looking very much like a choir robe, with long pointed sleeves as its distinguishing mark.

Even when the gowns are a uniform black, the hoods are all different. The longest and fullest is the doctor's hood, and the hoods for a master or a bachelor are simply smaller versions. The hood was once worn on the head, although in its modern shape it would be difficult to make a hat out of it that wouldn't remind onlookers of Salvador Dali. The inside of the hood is lined with colors to identify the institution that granted the degree. Thus at Georgetown all hoods have a lining of blue and gray. The border around the hood generally indicates the subject in which the degree was taken.

These colors around the hood have remarkable aptness and, indeed, considered together, reveal the prejudices of the academy about its various specialties. The humanities bask in the purity of white, whereas the more practical sciences show gold. Economics is ironically signified by copper, medicine by green and law by presumptuous imperial purple. The bias of the academy gives drab to business as its color. Theology processes in martyr's scarlet and philosophy in contemplative blue. More random colors can be seen in dentistry's lilac, education's light blue, engineering's orange, fine arts' brown, music's pink, public health's salmon and nursing's apricot. The hood is worn around the throat and over the shoulders, and these identifying colors can generally be spotted right under the wearer's chin.

Identifying the markings on academic birds of such high plumage is a pacifying exercise at graduation ceremonies. It can keep the kids quiet, and provide the entire family with an education in ancient symbols. It recalls the words of a distinguished newspaper editor who, when he moved from his paper's religion to its education desk, quipped that he did so because he preferred medieval institutions.

HENRY WINKLER
DOCTOR OF HUMANE LETTERS, HONORIS CAUSA

To become an icon for a single generation is a rare achievement. To become an icon across multiple generations, through multiple roles, is altogether extraordinary.

For those of a certain age, the ultimate embodiment of cool was Arthur Fonzarelli—The Fonz—an archetypal greaser who could command a room with the snap of his fingers. Henry Winkler was so compelling in the role that what began as a sidekick soon became the heart of Happy Days. Spanning 11 seasons and 255 episodes, the show followed a group of teenage friends in an idealized 1950s Milwaukee. Winkler's charisma quickly established The Fonz as its centerpiece, outshining even its lead, Richie Cunningham, played by Ron Howard.

Many students graduating today know Winkler best as the prickly acting teacher, Gene Cousineau, who elicits near-fanatical devotion from his students in HBO's Barry, a role for which he won a Primetime Emmy.

Winkler has reinvented himself time and again, disappearing into a remarkable range of roles—football coach, art dealer, attorney, doctor—from The Waterboy to The French Dispatch; from Arrested Development to Parks and Recreation.

But Winkler's most profound transformation never played out on screen—something, for a time, deliberately hidden from view.

He has described his youth as filled with “a high level of low self-esteem.” Struggling in school, he barely passed classes, taking geometry four times before scraping by with a D-. At the time, his struggle had no name. His difficulties in school were an endless source of frustration for his parents, Ilsa and Harry Winkler, German Jews who had fled Nazi Germany for America in 1939. It wasn't until age 31 that Winkler learned he had dyslexia. His stepson's diagnosis led to his own, reshaping the story he'd always been told: that he wasn't trying hard enough, that he was lazy—or worse, that he was stupid.

In reality, Winkler was extraordinarily resourceful. At Emerson, he wrote an essay on Émile Durkheim using only the table of contents—and got a B-. Unable to read a required Shakespeare passage for his Yale Drama School audition, he ad-libbed in Shakespearean style—and got in. He memorized scripts slowly, methodically, one word at a time. When that didn't work, he relied on instinct to capture “the essence” of his characters.

“Destiny is strange,” Winkler once said. Indeed, the child who struggled to read would become a bestselling author. Among his proudest achievements are the Hank Zipzer children’s books, which follow the adventures of a dyslexic New York City schoolboy—the so-called “world’s greatest underachiever.” The 17-book series, translated into 11 languages, even uses a typeface specially designed for dyslexic readers.

If destiny is strange, perhaps the strangest part is this: In reclaiming the medium that once caused him so much struggle and shame, Winkler found triumph—and offered hope for others.

And, as for that D- in geometry? To this day, he insists he has never once been asked about the hypotenuse.

Today, Georgetown University honors a man who has devoted his life to the search for truth in art. A universally beloved actor, author, and advocate, Henry Winkler has spent decades bringing joy and laughter to audiences through his memorable performances while empowering children with learning differences through his writing.

Few actors have had a career as enduring or created characters as iconic as Henry Winkler. Yet, it is his dedication to education and advocacy that most reflects the Jesuit value of cura personalis—care for the whole person. His Hank Zipzer book series and the BBC television show it inspired have been widely praised for increasing understanding and reducing stigma around dyslexia and other learning challenges. Despite his many accolades—including Emmys, Golden Globes, and Critics Choice Awards—Winkler has said that letters from children, especially one who wrote, “How did you know me so well?” have been as meaningful to him as any trophy. Through his work, Winkler has given future generations the support, validation, and visibility he once lacked—filling that void with compassion and dignity.

For his contributions to American popular culture, to storytelling, and to education, and for the support and validation he has provided to generations of children with learning differences, Georgetown University confers upon Henry Winkler the degree of Doctor of Humane Letters, Honoris Causa.

LORETTA SWEET JEMMOTT
DOCTOR OF SCIENCE, HONORIS CAUSA

Today, Georgetown University honors a leader in community-based, evidence-supported research that has improved health outcomes and health equity for those living in her hometown of Philadelphia and in several countries around the world.

From developing interventions that have decreased rates of teen pregnancy and STI transmission to launching wellness hubs that support vulnerable populations, Dr. Loretta Jemmott has demonstrated a dedication to health justice that reflects the mission and values of the Georgetown University School of Nursing.

Dr. Jemmott currently serves as the M. Louise Fitzpatrick Endowed Professor of Community and Home Health Nursing at Villanova University's Fitzpatrick College of Nursing. In that role, she trains students and colleagues to pursue the community-based research for which she is held in high esteem.

Growing up in an impoverished neighborhood in West Philadelphia, Dr. Jemmott was a first-generation college student. After earning her BSN from Hampton Institute of Nursing, an HBCU in Hampton, Virginia, she returned to Philadelphia and worked to reduce rates of teen pregnancy by leading educational workshops at schools and community agencies.

When she realized that her approach to reducing teen pregnancy wasn't effective, Dr. Jemmott went back to school. She earned an MSN from the University of Pennsylvania Graduate School of Education and her PhD in child, adolescent and family mental health nursing from the University of Pennsylvania School of Nursing.

During a class for her doctoral degree, an instructor stressed the importance of spending time in communities to "learn the code of the streets," a message Dr. Jemmott took to heart. Since then, whether she's working in her hometown or communities abroad, Dr. Jemmott has made it her mission to learn about the places where she works to identify the best ways to serve its residents.

After completing her doctorate in 1987, Dr. Jemmott and a colleague applied for a grant from amfAR, the Foundation for AIDS Research, to design an intervention to reduce high-risk sexual behavior among Black male teenagers in West Philadelphia. A randomized controlled trial published in the American Journal of Public Health showed that the intervention led to a decrease in risky sexual behavior.

The collaboration was successful in another way - in 1989, Dr. Jemmott's research partner became her husband. Together, they have received more than $150 million in NIH funding to support their research on interventions to decrease high-risk sexual behaviors among diverse populations in the U.S., Botswana, South Africa, Jamaica, Mexico and Puerto Rico. She has published more than 100 peer-reviewed articles, books and chapters.

Dr. Jemmott worked at her alma mater, the University of Pennsylvania, for 20 years before becoming vice president for health and health equity, and professor in the College of Nursing and Health Professions at Drexel University in 2015. The move to Drexel empowered her to make a difference in a community only a few blocks from where she grew up.

Through a community campaign titled "We're Here Because We Care: Building Healthy Communities Together," -or- Through a community campaign to find ways to improve the health of her community, Dr. Jemmott led meetings with community leaders, residents and stakeholders. Those conversations led to the launch of Drexel's Community Wellness HUB, which offers health education workshops, screenings, counseling, case management and more in a warm, respectful and inviting setting.

At Villanova, Dr. Jemmott inspires the next generation of community-engaged researchers to meet people where they are, whether that's a freestanding clinic, school, church, housing development or barbershop. In listening to members of a community, she develops interventions that empower them to make a difference in their own health as well as their neighbors'.

Over the course of her career, Dr. Jemmott has personified the Georgetown value of "service for others." Her focus on communities with impoverished and vulnerable residents reflects her dedication to health equity and social justice, and her commitment to evidence-based research centered around the needs of individuals in a community affirms their humanity.

In recognition of her dedication to community-engaged, evidence-based research and her commitment to preparing future researchers to continue that work, Georgetown University bestows upon Dr. Loretta Jemmott the degree of Doctor of Science, Honoris Causa.

THE HONORABLE KONO TARO
DOCTOR OF HUMANE LETTERS, HONORIS CAUSA

Georgetown honors today one of its own, a loyal alumnus who represents, in his career and in his character, the very essence of the century-old mission of the School of Foreign Service. A viral photograph captured Kono Taro walking up the stairs alone while every other member of the Japanese Cabinet is taking an escalator. That image says it all. Never counting on the establishment to elevate him, he has always taken the path he believed in, the path of uncompromisingly dedicated service. Time Magazine referred to him as “an outspoken maverick.” He is that, a change maker who has been consistently unafraid to challenge convention. But he is more than just a maverick. With no interest in self-aggrandizement or personal fame, he has been a life-long voice for conscience and for peace.

Jesuit Georgetown has a particular, and poignant, connection to Japan. Father Pedro Arrupe, the twenty-eighth Superior General of the Society of Jesus, was serving in a church in the outskirts of Hiroshima when the atomic bomb was dropped and, with his training in medicine, was one of the first responders to treat the injured. That horrific experience in many ways shaped his recommitment of the Jesuits and their schools to train people for others. What we are now proud to identify as the Spirit of Georgetown. And it is that Spirit which we recognize and salute today in this son of Georgetown.

And so today, in recognition of his relentless efforts as a changemaker, his accomplishments in global diplomacy, and his unwavering commitment to the service of his nation and the world, Georgetown University with pride and affection bestows on the Honorable Kono Taro the degree of Doctor of Humane Letters, Honoris Causa.

MICHAEL PSAROS
DOCTOR OF HUMANE LETTERS, HONORIS CAUSA

Today, Georgetown University honors an alumnus who draws from the values and the education he learned at Georgetown, and his deep spirituality, to impact those around him, from the companies his firm owns, to the Holy Orthodox Church, and to future generations of Hoyas.

Michael Psaros (B'89, P'21) applies the idea of making things better beyond his business life. For example, he is credited as a pivotal leader in the effort to rebuild the St. Nicholas Greek Orthodox Church and National Shrine at Ground Zero in New York City. The Saint Nicholas National Shrine is the only house of worship located at Ground Zero, New York's only National Shrine, and has attracted over 500,000 visitors from around the world since it opened in December 2022. It stands as a cenotaph to the 3,000 people who were martyred on September 11, 2001.

He is an Archon of the Ecumenical Patriarch, Order of St. Andrew, the oldest order in Christendom, and was invested by the Ecumenical Patriarch of Constantinople. He serves on the Board of Trustees and Investment Committees of numerous national Orthodox endowments, including Leadership 100 Endowment, the Ecumenical Bartholomew Endowment and the Hellenic Initiative. He previously served as the Treasurer of the Greek Orthodox Archdiocese of America and currently serves on its Executive Committee.

In 2024, Psaros was honored by the Government of the Hellenic Republic and the Hellenic Post for his many contributions to Hellenism as a leading member of the global Hellenic diaspora. Mike was placed on a limited-edition postage stamp in circulation in Greece through 2026.

The idea of seeking out initiatives that drive impact also have brought Psaros and his family back to the Hilltop. Psaros served on the Georgetown University Board of Directors, and currently serves as the vice chair of the McDonough Board of Advisors and the Advisory Board for the Georgetown University Endowment.

The Psaros family created the university's "Ecumenical Patriarch Bartholomew Endowed Orthodox Chaplaincy" and funded an Orthodox Christian Iconostasis and accompanying Iconography for the Copley Crypt Chapel.

Perhaps the largest impact to the school is the family's endowment of the Georgetown Psaros Center for Financial Markets and Policy, the preeminent destination for unbiased expertise at the intersection of finance and policy. The Psaros Center drives policy and practice by engaging researchers, policy leaders, and students on important policy issues at the nexus of business, the economy, regulation, and legislation. The Center provides unbiased, non-partisan, objective expertise to guide policy and practice, and has proven to be an influential resource in Washington, D.C. and across the world. The establishment of this Center, which is led by his faculty mentor, inspiration and dear friend, Reena Aggarwal, is a reflection of the longstanding legacy that the Psaros family will have on serving society through impactful initiatives.

In recognition of his passion to use business as a force for good, his selfless focus on impacting others, and his drive to bring out the best in all of those who work alongside him, Georgetown is privileged to bestow upon Michael Psaros the degree of Doctor of Humane Letters, Honoris Causa.

MARIA D. VAN KERKHOVE
DOCTOR OF SCIENCE, HONORIS CAUSA

Today Georgetown University recognizes a visionary leader whose journey inspires us all to follow our curiosity, and to embrace the challenges of global public health with courage and collaboration. Throughout her distinguished career in public health, Dr. Maria Van Kerkhove has exemplified a commitment to a holistic approach to health that aligns with the mission and values of the Georgetown School of Health.

Dr. Van Kerkhove currently serves as interim director of the department of epidemic and pandemic threat management within the World Health Organization's Health Emergencies Program. In this role, she leads the WHO's prevention and control programs for pathogens that have the potential to become epidemic and pandemics.

Dr. Van Kerkhove's public health career began in her high school AP biology class, where she became fascinated by infectious diseases and the complex relationships between pathogens, humans, and animals. At Cornell University, she conducted field research in ethnobotany, which studies the relationships between humans and plants, and zoopharmacognosy, the multidisciplinary study of how animals self-medicate using plants, soils and insects. This paved the way for her to work with indigenous communities in Mexico, Venezuela, and Costa Rica to study medicinal plants and traditional approaches to disease management.

After earning her Master's degree in epidemiology from Stanford University, Dr. Van Kerkhove spent five years at an engineering and scientific consulting firm in New York, where she honed her skills in evidence assessment and public communication—experiences that would prove invaluable during later public health crises. She subsequently earned her PhD from the London School of Hygiene and Tropical Medicine, during which time she was able to conduct field research on H5N1 in Cambodia.

Dr. Van Kerkhove eventually realized her long-held dream of working with the WHO, where she learned to merge the technical aspects of her work with policy and diplomacy considerations. Driven by her great admiration for the agency, she spent eight years working with WHO through a symbolic $1 contract while maintaining her position as a postdoctoral researcher at the Imperial College London's MRC Centre for Outbreak Analysis. She went on to lead the outbreak investigation task force at Institut Pasteur before joining WHO full-time in 2017.

Throughout her career, Dr. Van Kerkhove has been at the forefront of international responses to major disease outbreaks, including Ebola, MERS, and most recently, COVID-19. She was part of a coalition of WHO teams that worked to organize and publish known information about COVID-19 in the earliest days. Dr. Van Kerkhove became known to millions worldwide through regular WHO press conferences to keep the public apprised of the latest evidence and public health guidance throughout the pandemic.

Recognizing that outbreaks “begin and end in communities,” and that effective prevention and response require engaging diverse perspectives, disciplines, and cultural backgrounds, Dr. Van Kerkhove’s approach to public health is fundamentally holistic and collaborative.

Her career exemplifies Georgetown School of Health’s commitment to comprehensive, equitable approaches to health that recognize the dignity and wholeness of each person. Her work reminds us that public health is, above all, a deeply human endeavor that requires curiosity, scientific rigor, diplomatic skill, and unwavering dedication to the common good.

In recognition of her tireless devotion to scientific inquiry and to demystifying public health, Georgetown University, with admiration and appreciation, bestows upon Dr. Maria Van Kerkhove the degree of Doctor of Science, Honoris Causa.

LUIS ARRIAGA VALENZUELA, S.J.
DOCTOR OF HUMANE LETTERS, HONORIS CAUSA

The Society of Jesus is fundamentally committed to education, the pursuit of justice for the marginalized, and the fostering of reconciliation among peoples. Today, Georgetown University recognizes the Reverend Doctor Luis Arriaga Valenzuela, whose distinguished career as an academic and public advocate embodies these interconnected ideals with profound dedication.

A Jesuit priest, legal scholar, and esteemed academic leader, Father Arriaga has devoted his professional life to the defense and advancement of human rights within his native Mexico. Currently serving as the President of the Universidad Iberoamericana (IBERO) in Mexico City, his extensive leadership also includes presidencies of ITESO Jesuit University in Guadalajara and the Association of Jesuit Universities in Latin America.

Father Arriaga's human rights advocacy has emerged from close collaborations with Indigenous communities, migrant populations, and individuals in vulnerable circumstances across Chiapas, the border region, and the United States. His efforts extend beyond direct advocacy to encompass significant leadership roles within numerous organizations, including the Center for Reflection and Action of Labor, Cultural and Educational Standards in Guadalajara; the Ignatius Loyola Migrant and Refugee Association in Chiapas; the Legal Rights Center for the Indigenous in Chiapas; and the Center for Social Justice and International Law in Washington, D.C.

In the aftermath of the tragic murders of two Jesuit priests in Chihuahua in June 2022, Father Arriaga emerged as a prominent and articulate voice, mobilizing the Church, the Jesuit order, and the educational establishment in Mexico to demand lasting change through non-violent means. His denunciation of the extrajudicial killing of their murderer was particularly incisive, as he articulated in the Jesuit professional journal for higher education, Conversations: "As Jesuits, we mourn this death too, inhumanly celebrated by more than one authority, and we insist that we did not fight for this outcome. In a country where an average of 35,000 people are murdered every year, we must urgently change our way of doing justice." The Jesuit commitment to justice and peace, he eloquently wrote, "demands a journey to the roots of our historical reality and our inner self. We must find in the depths of our own suffering a renewed fervor for justice. Our struggle is radical because it implies understanding that the body of the murdered — and that of the victimizers — is our own body.”

His unwavering commitment to promoting the human rights of the disenfranchised has been acknowledged through several prestigious accolades, including the Emilio Krieger Medal from the National Association of Democratic Lawyers and the Hermila Galindo Award from the Human Rights Commission of Mexico City.

In profound recognition of his significant academic achievements, his enduring and consequential contributions to the cause of human rights, and a courageous life lived in exemplary service to human dignity and the common good, Georgetown University, with deep admiration and respect, today confers upon the Reverend Doctor Luis Arriaga Valenzuela the degree of Doctor of Humane Letters, Honoris Causa.

LORETTA SWEET JEMMOTT
DOCTOR OF SCIENCE, HONORIS CAUSA

Today, Georgetown University honors a leader in community-based, evidence-supported research that has improved health outcomes and health equity for those living in her hometown of Philadelphia and in several countries around the world.

From developing interventions that have decreased rates of teen pregnancy and STI transmission to launching wellness hubs that support vulnerable populations, Dr. Loretta Jemmott has demonstrated a dedication to health justice that reflects the mission and values of the Georgetown University School of Nursing.

Dr. Jemmott currently serves as the M. Louise Fitzpatrick Endowed Professor of Community and Home Health Nursing at Villanova University's Fitzpatrick College of Nursing. In that role, she trains students and colleagues to pursue the community-based research for which she is held in high esteem.

Growing up in an impoverished neighborhood in West Philadelphia, Dr. Jemmott was a first-generation college student. After earning her BSN from Hampton Institute of Nursing, an HBCU in Hampton, Virginia, she returned to Philadelphia and worked to reduce rates of teen pregnancy by leading educational workshops at schools and community agencies.

When she realized that her approach to reducing teen pregnancy wasn't effective, Dr. Jemmott went back to school. She earned an MSN from the University of Pennsylvania Graduate School of Education and her PhD in child, adolescent and family mental health nursing from the University of Pennsylvania School of Nursing.

During a class for her doctoral degree, an instructor stressed the importance of spending time in communities to "learn the code of the streets," a message Dr. Jemmott took to heart. Since then, whether she's working in her hometown or communities abroad, Dr. Jemmott has made it her mission to learn about the places where she works to identify the best ways to serve its residents.

After completing her doctorate in 1987, Dr. Jemmott and a colleague applied for a grant from amfAR, the Foundation for AIDS Research, to design an intervention to reduce high-risk sexual behavior among Black male teenagers in West Philadelphia. A randomized controlled trial published in the American Journal of Public Health showed that the intervention led to a decrease in risky sexual behavior.

The collaboration was successful in another way - in 1989, Dr. Jemmott's research partner became her husband. Together, they have received more than $150 million in NIH funding to support their research on interventions to decrease high-risk sexual behaviors among diverse populations in the U.S., Botswana, South Africa, Jamaica, Mexico and Puerto Rico. She has published more than 100 peer-reviewed articles, books and chapters.

Dr. Jemmott worked at her alma mater, the University of Pennsylvania, for 20 years before becoming vice president for health and health equity, and professor in the College of Nursing and Health Professions at Drexel University in 2015. The move to Drexel empowered her to make a difference in a community only a few blocks from where she grew up.

Through a community campaign titled "We're Here Because We Care: Building Healthy Communities Together," -or- Through a community campaign to find ways to improve the health of her community, Dr. Jemmott led meetings with community leaders, residents and stakeholders. Those conversations led to the launch of Drexel's Community Wellness HUB, which offers health education workshops, screenings, counseling, case management and more in a warm, respectful and inviting setting.

At Villanova, Dr. Jemmott inspires the next generation of community-engaged researchers to meet people where they are, whether that's a freestanding clinic, school, church, housing development or barbershop. In listening to members of a community, she develops interventions that empower them to make a difference in their own health as well as their neighbors'.

Over the course of her career, Dr. Jemmott has personified the Georgetown value of "service for others." Her focus on communities with impoverished and vulnerable residents reflects her dedication to health equity and social justice, and her commitment to evidence-based research centered around the needs of individuals in a community affirms their humanity.

In recognition of her dedication to community-engaged, evidence-based research and her commitment to preparing future researchers to continue that work, Georgetown University bestows upon Dr. Loretta Jemmot the degree of Doctor of Science, Honoris Causa.

FILIPPO GRANDI
DOCTOR OF HUMANE LETTERS, HONORIS CAUSA

In his 2024 message for the World Day of Migrants and Refugees, His Holiness Pope Francis invited us to see all migrants “as living images of God’s people on their way to the eternal homeland.” The Pope’s vision resonates powerfully with Georgetown’s Jesuit tradition, in particular with the historic focus of the SFS on service that is genuinely international. It is therefore a particular joy today to recognize and honor His Excellency Filippo Grandi, United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees. We celebrate him not only because of his extraordinary diplomatic skills but also because of the moral and insistently humanitarian vision which shapes all that he does. He insists that “refugees are in fragile situations but they are not fragile -- they are resilient and can be partners in others’ future.” A belief to which he gave remarkable witness only a year ago in fostering the Refugee Olympic Team. We must respond to the real and pressing needs of migrants, but --Filippo Grandi cautions us-- we must also respect and foster their dignity as fellow human beings. Georgetown is proud to train men and women for others; Filippo Grandi urges us to never forget how we treat the most marginalized among us, affects all of us.

Therefore, with deep respect and well justified praise, Georgetown University is proud to bestow on His Excellency Filippo Grandi, the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees, the degree of Doctor of Humane Letters, Honoris Causa.

AJAY BANGA
DOCTOR OF HUMANE LETTERS, HONORIS CAUSA

Today, Georgetown University honors a visionary leader in global finance and economic development. As the President of the World Bank Group and former CEO of Mastercard, Ajay Banga has dedicated his career to driving financial inclusion, fostering sustainable growth, and leveraging technology to transform economies. His leadership has spanned both private and public sectors, demonstrating an unwavering commitment to innovation, economic equity, and global prosperity. Throughout his distinguished career, Banga has exemplified the power of purpose-driven leadership.

Banga's passion for financial inclusion has been a defining feature of his career. Recognizing that access to financial services is a critical driver of economic opportunity, he championed initiatives aimed at integrating marginalized populations into the global financial system. Under his leadership, Mastercard launched the Center for Inclusive Growth, which advances equitable and sustainable growth and financial inclusion around the world.

In addition to his corporate leadership, Banga has been an advocate for ethical and responsible business practices. As vice chair of General Atlantic and a member of various global advisory boards, he has promoted sustainable economic policies and corporate responsibility. Banga also served as co-chair of the Partnership for Central America, a coalition of private organizations that works to advance economic opportunity across underserved populations in El Salvador, Guatemala, and Honduras.

His efforts have earned him numerous accolades, including the Padma Shri, one of India's highest civilian honors, awarded in 2016 for his contributions to trade and industry. He also received the Foreign Policy Association Medal, the Ellis Island Medal of Honor, the Business Council for International Understanding's Global Leadership Award, the Distinguished Friends of Singapore Public Service Star, and one of TIME magazine's 100 Most Influential People for 2024.

As president of the World Bank Group, Banga addresses some of the world's most pressing challenges, including climate change, economic inequality, and the looming global jobs crisis. With 1.2 billion young people in emerging markets poised to enter the workforce in the coming years, Banga has championed a bold pivot toward creating inclusive dignified employment opportunities as the surest path to ending poverty. Under his leadership, the Bank has undertaken sweeping institutional reforms – streamlining internal processes, reducing project approval times, increasing transparency, and breaking down operational silos – to become more agile and outcome-focused. His appointment marks a transformational moment for international development, as nations grapple with economic recovery, technological disruption, and environmental sustainability.

How does one accomplish such wide-ranging goals? “Getting the small things right first will eventually lead to big changes,” he told TIME magazine. “Work on solutions, and let them build at scale.”

Banga exemplifies the mission of Georgetown University’s McDonough School of Business to educate future generations of leaders who can bring a values-based business approach to solving the world’s most complex issues. For his impact in making the world a better place for the most disadvantaged populations, for his desire to create positive change in the world, and for his focus on sustainable solutions to important issues, Georgetown University is privileged to bestow upon Ajay Banga the degree of Doctor of Humane Letters, Honoris Causa.

SAM FEIST
DOCTOR OF HUMANE LETTERS, HONORIS CAUSA

He received his law degree from Georgetown with honors and decided to use his gifts in the indispensable but often thankless work of journalism. He has been an innovator who also upheld old-fashioned values about the importance of the truth and the value of democracy. He continues to think that even in our currently wild, unpredictable and highly polarized media environment, citizens profit from hearing competing points of view directly from political leaders. Those who turn to the news, he insists, are perfectly capable of analyzing what they hear themselves. Today Georgetown honors one of its own, a truly exceptional journalist and leader, Sam Feist.

Sam Feist has had -- and continues to have -- a powerful influence on our public life and how Americans can gain the knowledge they need to be good citizens. In his 34 years at CNN, Sam managed its most important programs. Feist helped to conceptualize and was the founding Executive Producer of The Situation Room, the daily newscast now in its twelfth year. He has produced interviews with the leaders of the late 20th and early 21st Century, including Margaret Thatcher, Mikhail Gorbachev, Yitzhak Rabin, George H.W. Bush, Bill Clinton, Barack Obama and George W. Bush.

He received three Emmy Awards for his work as executive producer of CNN's coverage of the 2006 midterm elections, breaking news coverage of the 2011 Arab Spring, and CNN's Election Night coverage in 2012.

CNN Chief Executive Mark Thompson called Feist a "CNN institution" and "one of the best-connected journalists in Washington." He used those connections in the public interest, and now as the CEO of C-SPAN, he will keep doing that. His core objective is clear: "We," Sam said of C-SPAN, "are a longtime champion of trusting Americans to make up their own minds."

Sam Feist is not afraid to tell it like it is about our current moment. "We are not used to high-ranking officials saying things that are absolutely not true," he once said, "and we have to point it out, we have to say when something isn't true."

He also had good advice about social media, insisting it is no substitute for actually talking with each other. "You have to be skeptical of what you're seeing and reading on Twitter and applying it to the electorate," Sam said. "If you think you understand what's motivating voters because you're reading it on Twitter, you may be completely wrong."

The justly celebrated Jesuit theologian Bernard Lonergan would appreciate Sam, the care he has put into his work – and, above all, his dedication to the truth. Lonergan wrote: “One cannot play fast and loose with what one knows to be true.” Sam has lived by that. Lonergan also asked us to “thoroughly understand what it is to understand.” Sam has spent his life seeking that depth of understanding in service to the dialogue of democracy.

In recognition of his exceptional achievements in journalism, his respect for our fellow citizens, his skill in telling the story of our time, and his service to democracy, Georgetown is privileged to bestow upon Sam Feist the degree of Doctor of Humane Letters, Honoris Causa.

MARIA D. VAN KERKHOVE
DOCTOR OF SCIENCE, HONORIS CAUSA

Today Georgetown University recognizes a visionary leader whose journey inspires us all to follow our curiosity, and to embrace the challenges of global public health with courage and collaboration. Throughout her distinguished career in public health, Dr. Maria Van Kerkhove has exemplified a commitment to a holistic approach to health that aligns with the mission and values of the Georgetown School of Health.

Dr. Van Kerkhove currently serves as interim director of the department of epidemic and pandemic threat management within the World Health Organization's Health Emergencies Program. In this role, she leads the WHO's prevention and control programs for pathogens that have the potential to become epidemic and pandemics.

Dr. Van Kerkhove's public health career began in her high school AP biology class, where she became fascinated by infectious diseases and the complex relationships between pathogens, humans, and animals. At Cornell University, she conducted field research in ethnobotany, which studies the relationships between humans and plants, and zoopharmacognosy, the multidisciplinary study of how animals self-medicate using plants, soils and insects. This paved the way for her to work with indigenous communities in Mexico, Venezuela, and Costa Rica to study medicinal plants and traditional approaches to disease management.

After earning her Master's degree in epidemiology from Stanford University, Dr. Van Kerkhove spent five years at an engineering and scientific consulting firm in New York, where she honed her skills in evidence assessment and public communication—experiences that would prove invaluable during later public health crises. She subsequently earned her PhD from the London School of Hygiene and Tropical Medicine, during which time she was able to conduct field research on H5N1 in Cambodia.

Dr. Van Kerkhove eventually realized her long-held dream of working with the WHO, where she learned to merge the technical aspects of her work with policy and diplomacy considerations. Driven by her great admiration for the agency, she spent eight years working with WHO through a symbolic $1 contract while maintaining her position as a postdoctoral researcher at the Imperial College London's MRC Centre for Outbreak Analysis. She went on to lead the outbreak investigation task force at Institut Pasteur before joining WHO full-time in 2017.

Throughout her career, Dr. Van Kerkhove has been at the forefront of international responses to major disease outbreaks, including Ebola, MERS, and most recently, COVID-19. She was part of a coalition of WHO teams that worked to organize and publish known information about COVID-19 in the earliest days. Dr. Van Kerkhove became known to millions worldwide through regular WHO press conferences to keep the public apprised of the latest evidence and public health guidance throughout the pandemic. Recognizing that outbreaks “begin and end in communities,” and that effective prevention and response require engaging diverse perspectives, disciplines, and cultural backgrounds, Dr. Van Kerkhove's approach to public health is fundamentally holistic and collaborative.

Her career exemplifies Georgetown School of Health's commitment to comprehensive, equitable approaches to health that recognize the dignity and wholeness of each person. Her work reminds us that public health is, above all, a deeply human endeavor that requires curiosity, scientific rigor, diplomatic skill, and unwavering dedication to the common good.

In recognition of her tireless devotion to scientific inquiry and to demystifying public health, Georgetown University, with admiration and appreciation, bestows upon Dr. Maria Van Kerkhove the degree of Doctor of Science, Honoris Causa.

The Oath of Hippocrates

I, (PRONOUNCE NAME), solemnly promise to God Almighty that according to my ability and judgment I will endeavor at all times to observe the stipulations of this oath which, through ageless tradition, has governed the conduct of my predecessors in the profession which I am about to enter.

Appreciating the benefits of the instruction accorded to me, I promise to esteem and revere the teachers who have trained me in the science and art of medicine, to share my good fortune with them and to relieve their necessities should want befall them. To all who are deserving, but to none who are unworthy, I will freely impart a knowledge of my science and art.

I will adhere to the doctrine and prescribe the treatment which my ability and judgment assure me are most beneficial for my patients. I will abstain from everything which may be harmful or dangerous to them. I will attempt no treatment which evidently requires training and skill superior to mine.

With purity of purpose and holiness of life, I will practice my profession. My every word and deed in the homes of my patients or in other places of treatment will be directed solely to the welfare of these patients. With the help of God's grace they will find no occasion in my speech and actions to disrespect my profession. Whatever I see or hear as I practice my profession which should not be revealed, I will not divulge because such knowledge must remain secret.

As long as I keep this promise, I hope to enjoy happiness in life, success in my profession, and the respect of my fellow men and women. But may the reverse be my lot if I should willfully violate my solemn word now given before God.

VICTOR J. DZAU
DOCTOR OF SCIENCE, HONORIS CAUSA

Today, Georgetown University recognizes a physician-scientist, humanitarian, and one of the world's preeminent health leaders. Throughout his illustrious career, Dr. Victor J. Dzau has consistently been guided by a calling to serve humanity, whether through research, patient care, or helping shape policy.

Dr. Dzau is the president of the National Academy of Medicine and serves as vice chair of the National Research Council, the operating arm of the United States National Academies of Sciences, Engineering, and Medicine. He is also Chancellor Emeritus and James B. Duke Professor of Medicine at Duke University and the past President and CEO of the Duke University Health System.

The National Academy of Medicine brings together the foremost experts from the country and globally to provide independent, nonpartisan, evidence-based guidance on health policy. Under Dr. Dzau's leadership, the Academy offers a powerful platform for addressing complex challenges in medicine and public health, from pandemic preparedness to climate change impacts on health.

Dr. Dzau's journey in medicine began in Shanghai, China, where the aftermath of World War II and subsequent political upheaval forced his family to flee as refugees to Hong Kong when he was just five years old. He recalls how witnessing despair, poverty, and illness at a young age inspired him to pursue medicine as a means of alleviating suffering and improving lives.

After earning his medical degree from McGill University in Canada, he became chief resident at Harvard Medical School's Peter Bent Brigham Hospital, now Brigham and Women's Hospital. It was there that Dr. Dzau had the opportunity to engage in groundbreaking translational research on the application of ACE inhibitors for hypertension and heart failure.

Dr. Dzau recalls witnessing the dramatic recovery of a heart failure patient who was unable to lie down due to the severity of his symptoms. Upon receiving an ACE inhibitor that had been synthesized in the lab where Dr. Dzau worked, the patient made a remarkable recovery and was discharged shortly after. This patient's positive outcome reinforced Dr. Dzau's commitment to bridging laboratory discoveries with bedside care.

As his career progressed, Dr. Dzau sought to increase the impact of medicine globally. At Brigham and Women's Hospital, his collaboration with global health pioneers Paul Farmer and Jim Yong Kim led to the establishment of the Division of Global Health Equity, providing physicians an academic base to serve underserved populations globally. Similarly, his work to establish the Division of Women's Health demonstrated his commitment to addressing gaps in medical care and research.

During his decade as President and CEO of the Duke University Health System, Dr. Dzau increased the scope and scale of impact even further by embracing the importance of social determinants of health such as education, economic opportunity, and living conditions. This holistic understanding has led him to engage deeply with community initiatives, including programs to create career pathways for underprivileged youth.

Dr. Dzau believes the true measure of medical progress lies not just in discovery but in making sure all people have access to that discovery. Having risen to be one of the most impactful leaders in medicine, Dr. Dzau embodies the power of opportunity and inclusion. His life's work exemplifies Georgetown School of Medicine's value that medicine at its best is not merely a profession but a vocation—a calling to serve humanity.

In recognition of his career-long commitment to improve the field of science and its impact on people's lives the world over, Georgetown University, with admiration and appreciation, bestows upon Dr. Victor Dzau the degree of Doctor of Science, Honoris Causa.

DANIEL TSAI
DOCTOR OF LAWS, HONORIS CAUSA

Today, we honor Daniel Tsai, one of Taiwan's leading business visionaries, a global philanthropist, and a proud alumnus of Georgetown Law.

Daniel is chairman of the Fubon Group, which began as an insurance firm founded by his father, Wan-Tsai Tsai. Under his and his brother Richard's leadership, the Fubon Group has become one of Taiwan's largest companies, providing services that touch the daily lives of millions of Taiwanese, from banking and insurance to telecommunications and entertainment. Daniel is also the chairman of Taiwan Mobile, a communications and broadband company, and of Momo.com, Taiwan's leading e-commerce site.

In 1978 and 1979, Daniel spent a year here in Washington, earning an LL.M. in international trade and negotiation. It was his first-ever trip abroad. His time at Georgetown was short, but it left a big impression. Not only did he gain knowledge and skills that would serve him well as he grew his business, he went home with friends from all over the world and memories for a lifetime – navigating the Capital Beltway in an oversized 1970s station wagon, mistaking frozen yogurt for sour ice cream and olives for salty grapes, and learning from and studying alongside brilliant and hard-working classmates.

There's a Chinese proverb, "If you want happiness for a lifetime, help someone else." Through his philanthropy, Daniel has indeed secured happiness for many lifetimes. Indigenous people and underprivileged children in Taiwan, Taiwanese arts and culture, and global higher education are just a few of the causes that have benefited from Daniel's generosity.

Having experienced firsthand the transformative power of higher education and study abroad, Daniel has been remarkably generous to the institutions that have touched his own life and those of his family. The National Taiwan University, Fu Jen Catholic University, Tunghai University, and the University of Southern California, where he is a Trustee, all received generous gifts. In 2019, Daniel established an endowed scholarship fund to support Taiwanese students pursuing degrees at Georgetown Law.

Daniel followed that gift with a landmark donation to the Law Center in 2023 – the largest-ever capital gift in the history of both Georgetown Law and the entire university. Daniel's gift is the cornerstone contribution for the planning of a new, state-of-the-art academic building that will be known as Daniel Tsai Hall. It is a legacy that will transform the landscape of Georgetown and Washington, D.C. for generations to come.

In recognition of his pioneering business leadership in Taiwan and beyond, his great and generous philanthropic work here, in Taiwan, and around the world, and his devotion to his alma mater, Georgetown University is privileged to bestow upon Daniel Tsai the degree of Doctor of Laws, Honoris Causa.

HENRY LOUIS GATES, JR.
DOCTOR OF LAWS, HONORIS CAUSA

For more than 40 years, through his pioneering scholarship, his best-selling books, and award-winning documentaries, Henry Louis “Skip” Gates, Jr., the Alphonse Fletcher, Jr. University Professor and Director of the Hutchins Center for African & African American Research at Harvard University, has helped enlarge our understanding of our shared American experience.

Born to a homemaker and a paper mill worker in Piedmont, West Virginia, just four years before Brown v. Board of Education, Skip was among the first African-American students in Piedmont’s public schools, where he excelled and gained admission to Yale. He graduated summa cum laude and went on to complete a Ph.D. in English at Cambridge University, and, while building a career that took him from Yale to Cornell to Duke and finally Harvard, he unearthed the first known novels written by African Americans, established a canon of African-American literature, edited countless anthologies and reference books, and of course, became a TV star, creating searing and eye-opening documentaries on the African-American experience.

Skip has compiled a formidable resume of honors and firsts – one of the first recipients of a MacArthur Foundation “genius grant,” the first African American to receive a National Humanities Medal, the first African American to receive an honorary degree from Cambridge. He is a member of the American Academy of Arts and Letters. And last year, he was awarded the NAACP’s prestigious Spingarn Medal. A painting of him is in the collection of the Smithsonian Institution’s National Portrait Gallery. The honorary degree we will bestow in a few minutes is only the latest of the many scores he has already earned.

As a scholar, as a media star, Skip has been a champion of inclusion, showing how the great works of African American literature should be fully integrated into a larger, more pluralistic literary Canon, that African American history should be studied and taught by people of all races, and that a chairholder at Harvard University can master TikTok dances to everyone from Lady Gaga to Kendrick Lamar to Taylor Swift. “I rebel at the notion that I can’t be part of other groups,” he has said. “I want to ... experience a humanity that is neither colorless nor reducible to color. Bach and James Brown. Sushi and fried catfish.” Thank you, Skip, for teaching all of us the value of finding our roots...and our common ground.

Skip often tells the story of his postdoctoral period, when he was so frustrated by his dissertation he thought he’d go to law school. He did enroll at Yale Law School – and dropped out after a month. Law was not his calling. But now - finally - he will have his law degree, too.

In recognition of his achievements, Georgetown University is privileged to bestow upon this son of Piedmont, West Virginia – this giant cultural figure – and a friend and mentor to many, Henry Louis Gates, Jr. – the degree of Doctor of Laws, Honoris Causa.

STEPHEN J. PEMBERTON
DOCTOR OF HUMANE LETTERS, HONORIS CAUSA

Georgetown University is proudly rooted in a 500-year-old tradition of Catholic and Jesuit education. Connecting us to generations of graduates, past and present, this tradition challenges us to use our hard-earned knowledge and skills to fulfill “education that does justice.” At Georgetown, we are committed to the belief that the pursuit of knowledge should not be undertaken for its own sake, but in service to justice and the greater good.

Stephen J. Pemberton has dedicated his life’s work to advancing the common good. He is a celebrated philanthropist, pioneering corporate executive, captivating presenter, and bestselling author who has made equality, access, and opportunity the pillars of both his professional and personal life.

Mr. Pemberton’s professional accomplishments are impressive in their own right, but they take on greater meaning given that from a young age, the odds were heavily stacked against him. At only three years old, he was placed into America’s overburdened foster care system. He endured a childhood of adversity and hardship, particularly at the hands of guardians who were supposed to protect his well-being. He came of age in a chaotic environment that, by many measures, already seemed to dismiss his own potential and self-worth.

Yet, his story is not one of tragedy but triumph. Armed with the desire to better his life and supported by a few caretakers as well as strangers, he overcame his difficult beginnings to alter the trajectory of his life. He recounted his inspiring search for his biological family in his 2012 bestselling memoir A Chance in the World, which was adapted into an independent film in 2018 and a children’s book in 2021. Moreover, he established A Chance in the World Foundation, which is dedicated to redressing America’s foster care system, and especially helping young adults who age out of it. Most recently, he published his second book, The Lighthouse Effect, which highlights everyday heroes who transform lives through kindness, integrity, and presence.

Mr. Pemberton is deeply connected to the mission and values of a Jesuit education. He is a proud graduate of Boston College, where he also earned his master's degree; he now sits on its Board of Trustees. His dedication to access and inclusion for all is reflected in his board work for a wide range of mission-driven organizations, including Loyola Academy, The Wily Network, Boys Hope Girls Hope, Disability:IN, and others.

His work has rightly earned many awards and accolades. The U.S. Congress bestowed upon him the prestigious Horizon Award in 2015, which recognizes individuals from the private sector who have significantly contributed to expanding opportunities for all Americans. In 2014, he also received the Trumpet Award, which recognizes exemplary leaders in the African American community.

In recognition of his tireless advocacy for the marginalized and disenfranchised, and for his leadership through service, Georgetown University is proud to bestow upon Stephen J. Pemberton the degree of Doctor of Humane Letters, Honoris Causa.
